The Research - Policy Translation*
Community of Practice Resolves To:

o   Operate through three primary functions:
- Information sharing
- Capacity development
- Advocacy

o   Foster collaboration between researchers, policymakers, and practitioners to bridge the research-policy-practice gap.

o   Facilitate connections between researchers, policy makers and practitioners through quarterly workshops and ongoing communication.

o   Develop a set of indicators that government and academic institutions can use to help monitor research-policy translation performance.

o   Build a case study repository of best practice examples of research-policy translation.

o   Continuously monitor and evaluate the CoP's activities and effectiveness using self-developed process and outcome indicators, ensuring ongoing improvement.

*Reference to the translation of research into policy inherently includes practice. The term has been shortened for brevity, but the full concept of research-policy-practice translation remains implied.
